Death of W. L. Benth.

Wm. L. Benth died at the home of his son, A. Benth, 101 North College street, at 8 o'clock Thursday evening. He was 73 years old, and was sick but a few days with a heart trouble, but by which he has been afflicted at times for several years.

Mr. Benth was born in New York city on June 17, 1811, and came to Illinois in 1819, settling in Madison county, being among the earliest settlers in that part of the country. He lived on his farm there and at Bunker Hill until a few years ago, when he came to Decatur to reside with his only living child, and with whom he has found a pleasant home in his declining years. He has a sister, Mrs. Mary Welch, at Danville, Ky., and a brother, Samuel Benth, at Denver, Col.

Funeral services will be held at three o'clock Friday afternoon. The body will be taken to Bunker Hill for burial.

Birthday Surprises.

A birthday surprise party was given last night on Miss A. Hoen at her home on Central Avenue, in honor of Miss Emma Hoen of Springfield. Those present were Misses Claude Arthur, Mabel Smith, Gussie Ferguson, Nellie Starr, Maude Rogers, Minnie Winter, Ella Bessy, Maude McQuinn, Lottie Hower, Mary Hinkell, Bertha Lane, Laura Woods, Mattie Logan, and Masters Frank Dexton, Charles Logan, Walter Clark, Charles Ballard, Henry Marrett, Ed Bassey, Cass Nicholson, Joe Chronister, James Stafford, Rex Whitehurst, Harry Haines. Refreshments were served at 10:30.

Miss Ada Hoen was presented with a gold-headed parasol and other presents. The company left at a late hour.

Runaways.

Fred Werning has a team to his bakery wagon that can crowd more runaways into a week than any other six teams in town. Yesterday the horses ran away, turned over the wagon and broke the tongue. The end penetrated the breast of one of the horses and made a bad wound.

Runaways, but none of them disastrous, were caused recently by the new electric cars. G. W. Ehrhart & Co.'s big team of grays was one that became frightened and took a run up a side street. No damage was done, however.

Another Dynamo Here.

This time it is the dynamo complete of the Decatur Electric railway. It came in on the Wabash from Detroit yesterday and was unloaded in the afternoon, and is now in the power house of the company. Mr. Martin expects Frank Snow, the president of the company, to arrive this morning.

Three motors are finished and are expected any day now. When they come all the machinery necessary for the operation of the line will be on the ground.

Spring Valley Victims.

Two women, evidently foreigners, and honest looking, but somewhat dilapidated, were in Decatur Wednesday asking for money or clothing. They said their husbands were miners, thrown out by the Spring Valley strike, and their families were destitute. So far as known the women did not get much help here.

Another Blue Ribbon.

F. B. Tait & Co.'s "Jim Dandy" corn-plaster was also at the Champaign fair. There were six competitors, but the judges said Tait & Co. had the "Jim Dandy," and gave it the blue ribbon. It would seem that Tait & Co. had joined the Murphy movement from the way the blue ribbons are coming their way.

A GOOD SALE.

The Choice of 25 and Boxes bring a Good Premium.

The sale of choice of boxes and seats at the opening of the Grand Opera House was held yesterday at the St. Nicholas. A crowd of about fifty was present, and the bidding while steady and interesting, was not especially spirited.

It was just two o'clock when J. W. Race called, "Oyes, Oyes, Oyes, the sale of boxes and seats is now about to commence!" The crowd moved up to the effect, that two boxes of the lower floor were reserved for Mr. Powers, and one would be reserved for Mr. Oglesby, thus leaving only one box down stairs to be sold. All the boxes in the balcony were sold. The regular prices of the boxes are $10 for the lower ones and $5 for the upper ones.

At the first call, "Who bids for the first box?" Dr. O. P. Corman remarked quietly, "Five dollars," thus making the price of the box $15. Mr. Race himself made it $9, Dr. Corman added $1, and finally the box was sold to Dr. Corman for $12, a cost to the doctor of $2.

The boxes on the balcony floor were then sold, J. W. Race, L. L. Race and D. H. Conklin being the only bidders. The prices for all four were $8 each, Mr. Race taking two of them.

Then the seats in the parquette were taken up. D. H. Conklin started at $2.50, and the first choice was shortly knocked off to him at $2.50 a seat. Dr. Cass Chenoweth got second choice, and Andrew Stevens got third choice all at the same price. Fifteen seats were then sold for $3.50 each, and the price dropped to $2.25. A few were sold at that rate, a few at $2, and about 150 at $1.50, a premium above the regular price of 50 cents.

The total premium above the regular price of the seats and boxes sold amounted to about $10, which was fully as much as Manager Haines expected, and which will make the receipts for the first night very satisfactory, supposing as is reasonable, that the house will be crowded.

The regular sale will begin next Tuesday at 8 in the morning at the box office. There are yet about 300 good seats taken on the lower floor and 321 in the balcony, making about 600 in all, so that those who have waited can still get good places.

SUDDENLY CALLED.

James L. Frost Dies While Talking to Some Friends.

The neighborhood of Franklin and South Park streets was thrown into excitement yesterday about 10:30 by the sudden death of James L. Frost, a Wabash brakeman, well known among all the railroad men, and comparatively well known in the city. He was sitting with two companions, Melvin Robinson and Kirby May, talking quietly, when he fell forward, struggling slightly, as it is felt. He died inside of a few seconds. No doctor was called, as there was manifestly nothing for one to do. It was generally supposed that heart disease caused his death. He had been drinking for two or three days previously, but so far as known did not drink much yesterday.

A crowd soon gathered. Coroner Bendure, who was notified at once, soon came, and, with the assistance of Marshal Mason, he conveyed the body to J. B. Ballard's undertaking room.

There an inquest was held at 2 in the afternoon. Nothing more than the facts immediately connected with the death was developed.

Melville Robinson, the third witness called before the jury, told the most connected and complete account of the incidents just previous to the death of Frost. He said:

"At the corner of Dr. Stoner's drug store I met Frost. He shook hands with me and said, 'Let's go and take a drink.' We went down to Ed Grubel's saloon. I took a drink and he did not. We came out and went to Pete Sells saloon and I stopped to talk to Henry Kedley. I said, 'Frost, I got to go down to the levee. Kelly was waiting for me.' Frost said, 'Don't be in a hurry; let's go into Sells' and have a drink. I think I am good at Sells.' We went in and I took whisky and Frost took pop. He was not sober and he was not drunk. He acted to me like a man that had taken a few drinks.

"We came out of the saloon and sat down on three beer kegs. While we were sitting there Kirby May sat down beside him. While we three were sitting there Frost was talking, and all at once he wilted and fell over on his face on the brick walk. As soon as he fell I started to pick him up and Kirby May said he was having a fit. I was helping him up and George Warren stepped up and helped him. He lived three or four minutes. I know of no cause for his death. He did not complain that he was sick. He was laughing and talking and seemed to be well. He did not say any thing about women."

George Warren testified to the same facts as Melvin Robinson. He was across the street and saw Frost fall forward on his face. He thought he had a fainter, but he had been shot through the heart."

Edward Drohn saw him drink three glasses of pop in the morning and had heard that he took poison, but knew no reason why he did so.

George Hargrave, James R. Walton and Ella Meredith were the other witnesses. The last named said she had seen him at different times Wednesday and Wednesday night. He had been drinking a great deal, and was as long as she had known him a drinking man.

THE VERDICT.

We, the undersigned jurors, sworn to inquire of the death of James Frost, do on oath find that he came to his death from a cause unknown to us.

JOHN MCWHINNY, JAMES M. LEE, W. H. BAILEY, C. O. HARGRAVE, JR., J. M. LEE, YOUNG, JR., WILLIAM NEDDERMEYER.

James L. Frost, known better by the name of "Jack" Frost, was a brakeman of many years experience on the Wabash. He had been off for several days but expected to go to work about the first of the month in Conductor Kershaw's crew. He leaves a widow and five children, the oldest 19 and the youngest 5. His parents and a brother live at Saunemin, Ill. They, with his son, Frank L., who has been working at Forrest, were telegraphed for yesterday and were expected to arrive last night.

The funeral arrangements have not yet been made.
